In response to requests related to grant-writing assistance, the Hart County Archway Partnership hosted a grant-writing workshop on November 11. Dr. Michelle Carney, Director of UGA’s Institute for Non-Profit Organizations, conducted the half-day workshop, which was held at the Hart County Library. 38 people from approximately 20 different local organizations attended the workshop. Participants learned about the fundamentals of writing grants, suggestions and tips for successful applications, and online resources for identifying potential grant opportunities and further training. The goal of the workshop was to increase the local capacity of local organizations for writing grants to meet identified needs.
